Local learning and the Action Research Cycle

Local Learning is a peer learning method for local entrepreneurs in rural Africa to learn from each other. The Local Learning method combines face-to-face action learning with mentored peer-to-peer online exchanges. Entrepreneurs learn to improve their business operations and realize their future visions. Rural businesses make progress because sharing challenges, ideas and experiences, both good and bad; with other like-minded entrepreneurs stimulates innovation in business operations.

Local learning has the action research cycle at its core. This is a learning system for learning by doing which follows the following stages.
